GAIFAS launches October 1, 2026

AI financial intelligence for entrepreneurs · Amsterdam, The Netherlands

---

GAIFAS, the AI financial intelligence platform for entrepreneurs, holding companies and non-profits, opens to the public on October 1, 2026, the start of the final quarter of the year. The launch date was chosen deliberately: Q4 is when businesses close their books, plan next year's structure and decide where capital goes. GAIFAS enters the market at the exact moment those decisions are made.

What GAIFAS does

GAIFAS combines twelve specialist services in one platform: bookkeeping and reconciliation, VAT and corporate tax filing, payroll, credit control, holding and STAK structures, grant scanning, IFRS and Dutch GAAP reporting, US and Middle East tax, personal income tax, and consolidated group reporting. The platform is fully bilingual (English and Dutch) and starts at 29 euro per month.

Why the final quarter

Most entrepreneurs discover structural mistakes after the fiscal year has closed, when nothing can be corrected. By launching on October 1, GAIFAS gives businesses a full quarter to restructure, claim what they are entitled to and enter the new fiscal year correctly rather than retroactively.

Availability

Waitlist members receive early access codes and founding member pricing before October 1, 2026. Founding pricing locks the subscription rate permanently and closes on launch day.

About GAIFAS

GAIFAS is a MAV€RIC Ventures company founded by Eric Burnik, a serial entrepreneur who built more than 30 companies across AI, private equity, government relations, media and impact ventures in the Netherlands, the United States and the Middle East. GAIFAS is not a licensed accountancy firm; AI-generated output should be reviewed by a professional before filing.
